The Death Penalty

The recent hanging of a murderer at Walkerton, Ontario, has revived the suggestion throughout that province that the capital penalty should not be exacted in county jails but in some central place in each province—the closest federal penitentiary, for instance.

It is argued that hangings in these small centres have a bad moral effect, not only on the inmates of the jails themselves, but upon the entire civilian population.

If the public conscience has at last awakened to the fact that executions are demoralizing in small towns, when will that conscience experience the larger awakening to the equally vital fact that executions are just as demoralizing to a whole country?

Capital punishment is retained on the argument that it is a deterrent to murder. That is an outrageous suggestion to begin with because it assumes that the state has the right to make one man suffer for the potential crimes of another.

However, capital punishment is not even a deterrent. The murder rate is no higher in areas that have no capital punishment than in areas that have. Prior to 1938, capital punishment had been abolished in a surprising number of countries, including Belgium, Sweden, Portugal, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Finland, Holland, Lithuania and Romania. In England, in 1935, a permanent-appointed committee recommended its abolition for an experimental period of five years.

Many Latin American countries abolished the death penalty years ago. In the United States it has disappeared in six states and all but four of the remainder permit its abolition to specify mercy in capital cases.

Capital punishment is not a deterrent and it is not a demoralizing and savage. It should disappear in Canada.

'Provincial Protectionism'

Nothing has occurred to point out the urgency of Dominion-provincial readjustments more emphatically than the failure of the various governments to achieve them. Some of the reactions to this failure indicate possibilities that are more than disturbing.

One of these possibilities was suggested recently by Premier Garson of Manitoba who, speaking at Hamilton, Ontario, said:

"One of the results of Canadians dealing freely with one another not that it has been produced in Western Canada is in the most orderly and lawful manner siphoned off into Ontario and Quebec as a result of the operation of national policies and of our corporate system of business. When that wealth crosses the interprovincial boundary, it becomes the taxable resources of these two provinces and we are left with the social costs of producing it."

"If we cannot work out a system of public finance which will enable the Canadian provinces to meet these social costs on something like an equal basis, our people will conclude that dealing with the fellow Canadians in other provinces is a losing proposition, and in consequence we shall reap a harvest of provincial protectionism in one form or another."

Mr. Garson did not indicate how the form that provincial protectionism might take, but it would undoubtedly involve some form of taxation upon the business done by the manufacturing, industrial and financial, in the prairie provinces and possibly elsewhere.

The Manitoba premier concluded by saying:

"What choice would be left to us but to act with the most bitter reluctance upon our own provincial rights?"

Anyhow, better that the powers should compete in making plans to prohibit atomic bombs than in making the bombs. That is the alternative.

An Immigrant Looks Back

By L.B.

I came to Canada from England in 1931. I was told that Alberta might be a good place to start a new life. I had heard that the heat Europe for a century—that Ontario could, if necessary, pave the streets of its major cities with its own nickel—that it would be possible to float all the British Isles in Lake Superior and miss them entirely en route.

But the thing that impresses me most is certain unspectacular qualities of her people. In an immigrant's opinion, the two basic races of the Dominion constitute, not a national problem, but a doubly rich heritage. Other nationalities would have come to this country, further enrich the national life and give color and variety to the scene.

Naturally, as an Englishman, I would look in Canada for what I believe are the virtues of my own country, and the French-Canadian has no monopoly in this respect. The French-Canadian is equally entitled to expect Canada to be good enough not to let the virtues of the great French heritage.

Canada is heir to the British tradition won by generations of men and women, most of them unknown to us by name. They can only be preserved by citizens prepared to make the same constant effort and to watch the soil of democracy lest any new seed of tyranny be sown.

But Canada can not only act as a museum and interpreter of the British tradition. She can add something of her own for the benefit of the world.

An immigrant living in Canada—particularly in the west—becomes conscious of a strongly developed social and community sense.

The restraint of the English, living in a heavily populated, small island, has prevented this sense from developing to the same extent.

An Englishman here, though he may not be able to bring his easy in his relationships with Canadians as he would like, recognizes the value of this attitude. This attitude is a new one to him, expresses Canadianism in a more important sense than any definition of Canadian nationalism.

Canada contains the world in miniature. The very texture of her nationhood impels her to be a nation-minded people, an instinct for co-operation. These qualities fit her to indicate to other nations the road towards racial understanding, freedom from tyranny and want and, finally, the establishment of peace as a principle of human conduct.

Today in Europe

By Randolph Churchill

PARIS—Walter Lippmann has taken a stand on the issue of the Kremlin to discredit Mr. Bernard Baruch's proposal for international control of atomic energy. Keynote of the Baruch plan is the proposal that the Big Five right of veto must be abandoned where a breach of atomic controls has occurred. If this is removed the whole plan must collapse. It is therefore disquieting that it is on abolition of the veto that Moscow and Lippmann are concentrating their fire.

The Lippmann argument is briefly: Proposal to abolish the veto is founded upon the American power of veto. The monopoly gives the United States an absolute veto.

Lippmann concludes Baruch "has not the slightest intention of surrendering this American veto, on which he intends to use it for all it is worth to induce other governments to agree to a treaty which we judge to be good enough not to veto." And "what we really want is not to abolish the veto but to persuade the Russians to agree to a treaty which they and we can and will ratify."

No useful comparison can be made between the power of veto which arises from America's unique possession of the bomb, and the right of veto which the U.N. charter grants. It is merely confusing the issue to apply the same word to two entirely different situations.

Especially so when the whole object is to get rid of the veto. Lippmann says "all this confusion of the issue. America has a monopoly of the bomb. It is therefore justifying itself by the fact that it is the only power which can be trusted to use it. It is therefore justifying itself by the fact that it is the only power which can be trusted to use it. It is therefore justifying itself by the fact that it is the only power which can be trusted to use it."

At the moment no one sits uneasily at the prospect of the United States suddenly dropping the bomb on his head. But the United States does not wish to be sole repository of this terrible power. It wishes to see nations indulging in a race to make bigger and better bombs.

The Road Ahead

By J. Harper Prowse, M.L.A.

This Dominion has now been a nation for 79 years. As nations go, this is a very old one. But in achievement Canada can well be proud of the 79 years which have passed since proclamation of The British North America Act, 1867. At that time the scattered settlements were hardly more than a continual headache to the British Colonial Office. Today Canada holds a leading and respected position among the nations of the world.

At the end of World War II this nation whose peoples comprise only 1.188th of the world population held an amazing position in the world as a producer of food in the United Nations, we were the third world trading nation, we were fourth among the United Nations in production of war supplies. Our contributions on the seas, on the land, and in the air played a part in the final victory over the enemies of freedom. And with the United States and Great Britain we shared the secret of atomic energy—in fact it was from our mines that the main supplies of the all important uranium were secured.

Although we are suffering from our close industrial and financial integration with the economy of the United States the success (up to the present) of our anti-inflation and price control measures is still the envy of our great neighbors to the south. In spite of our own contributions in the way of arms, men, and supplies we have also received a great deal of aid from Britain which have permitted her to prevent the complete collapse of her war-strained economy.

Our rehabilitation program for veterans—and we had more than a million men in uniform—has been a great success in every nation. And in spite of the fact that war production has been reduced to about half a million men have been discharged from the forces since V-E Day we had fewer than 250,000 unemployed in the country during the darkest period.

We have much to be thankful for—much to be proud of—and a lot that still needs to be done. The sectionalism and prejudice which nearly sabotaged Confederation 79 years ago still exist. The problems of production, distribution, labor-management relations, still await solution. But if we can come this far in only 79 years we can accept the challenge of the future.

Russia More Co-operative

During the past week or so, signs of a change in Soviet foreign policy have not been wanting. The attitude of unbridled distrust and aggressiveness, which has prevailed almost since the order of the day, seems to be giving way to something a little more co-operative.

This change has been manifested in several recognitions by the Kremlin. The most important, of course, was Molotov's unexpected willingness to compromise Russian aims and to attend foreign ministers' conference in Paris. Where formerly he was unwilling to budge an inch on anything, he has now agreed to settlements of the Trieste, Dodecanese, and Italian colonies questions on terms agreeable to the other powers and far short of the extreme Soviet demands. This change of front should make possible a friendly anti-communist conference and a general European settlement.

Less important, but still significant, is the consent of the Russian delegates and others coming before the United Nations atomic energy commission to be carried by a simple majority vote. Before this they were stuck on a two-thirds majority.

The same tendency toward conciliation was shown in an interview given yesterday by the Soviet ambassador to Washington, Nikolai Novikov. He declared that there was "no basis whatever for war between our country and the United States, and expressed his confidence that all matters now in dispute could be 'ironed out' satisfactorily."

All this appears to add up to a definite effort to allay resentment and suspicion in the Western countries and to make some of the good-will lost in recent months. The Kremlin may have realized that its tendency toward unilateral action and its stubborn, and even quarrelsome, attitude in international discussions, were playing into the hands of the Soviet propagandists and building up a dangerous store of ill-feeling all over the world.

It is well taken by Byrnes and Bevin at Paris, the repeated defeats suffered by Communist parties in western Europe, and the renewed threat of an anti-Russian "iron bloc"—all these were obvious danger signals. The policy of bluster and "trust" had plainly reached its limits.

If the Soviet leaders are sincerely anxious for more harmonious relations with the English-speaking nations, they will find Britain and the United States more than ready to meet them half-way.

Philippines Independence

Yesterday, a half-century of American rule in the Philippines came to an end. The islands have been granted full independence and have taken their place as a sovereign republic. Under the provisions of the Tydings and Philippine Act of 1934, independence should have come in 1945, but the war and the Japanese occupation forced a postponement of one year.

Though it began in a typical burst of nineteenth-century imperialism, the American occupation of the Philippines has been, on the whole a highly creditable episode.

When the United States sailed into Manila Bay in 1898, the islands were a backward, poverty-stricken Spanish colony, sunk in a stagnant sea of ignorance, and infested by brigands and pirates. A generation of American soldiers, administrators, and educators produced an almost miraculous transformation. Not only were law and order established, roads and railways built, and natural resources developed, but modern health and educational systems were set up for the whole archipelago. By 1941, the Philippines enjoyed the highest standard of living to be found anywhere in Asia.

Paradoxically, this seven-million advancement went a sincere effort to educate the people for self-government. Elections and representative institutions were introduced as early as 1907, and by 1934, the islands had attained the status of a preparation for full independence. During its period of dependence, the Philippine Commonwealth had to face problems as difficult as those which confronted the British in India or the Dutch in the Netherlands Indies.

The new republic faces very grave problems as it enters upon the path of independence. Its territory was twice a battle-ground during the war, and the damage and destruction were as severe here as anywhere in the world. Famine and disorder have persisted through the first year of liberation.

In all probability the country will be dependent on United States assistance for a long time to come.

Alberta's Holidays' Law

The Alberta Board of Industrial Relations was given the power more than three years ago to order a university's fortnight's holiday with pay for all regularly employed Alberta workers. It has now announced issuance of the order. The official statement says that it went into effect as of June 29 last.

The reason for this dating back of the order, one suspects, is to be found in Saskatchewan, where a similar holidays-with-pay law passed in 1944, went into effect on July 1, of this year.

Social Credit-ers would not like C.C.F.-ers to be able to boast that Saskatchewan beat Alberta to it.

Few would quarrel today with the principle of a fortnight's holiday with pay for all regularly employed workers. If the holidays are used, as in-creasingly they are, for rest and recreation, they should, in the long run, benefit both worker and employer by reducing illness and increasing output per man-hour.

Cost of Strikes to Strikers

Sumner H. Slichter, of Harvard University, has earned a high reputation in the United States as an impartial arbitrator between labor and capital in textile, printing, telegraph and food industries in the States. It is not surprising, therefore, that an article he wrote recently for the Atlantic Monthly has received wide attention.

An analysis of the results of last winter's strikes in General Motors, U.S. Steel and General Electric, brings this comment from him:

"The strikes...were hardly justified by the wage increases granted. Not until 1945, for example, will the workers in General Motors be as well off as they would have been had they not struck and had they worked steadily without any wage increase whatever. Not until 1953 will the employees of General Motors be as well off as they would have been had they accepted the company's offer of 13 cents a week and a half year's wage increase. The employees of General Electric are as well off as they would have been had they accepted the company's compromise offer of 10 cents and 10 percent. The employees of the United States Steel Corporation will be as well off as they would have been had they accepted the company's compromise offer of 15 cents."

Noting that over four thousand wage increases were secured since V-J Day by negotiation or arbitration, Dr. Slichter believes that the rank and file of unions may be giving some thought to this better way of labor relations.

"Members now know by actual experience what a strike costs, and so do their wives," he writes. "They have also learned that a strike vote may mean an actual strike, and that they had better not authorize a strike unless they are willing to engage in one." Recent experiences may also "cautious union members to be less tolerant of officers who precipitate long strikes for the sake of personal prestige."

Ending a 999-Year Lease

When the house of commons passed the bill authorizing the purchase by the C.N.R. of seven million dollars of a group of railway lines in Manitoba, Mr. Coldwell, C.C.F. leader in the House, said that the 999-year lease at a rental of $300,000 a year was "almost an insult to the intelligence of parliament." Most people will agree, even allowing for the fact that money commanded a much higher rate of interest 45 years ago, when the lease was negotiated.

Transport Minister Chevrier said the purchase would save about $90,000 a year, seven million at three percent yields $210,000 annually. That's $90,000 less than the existing $300,000 rental.

As the lease was signed in 1901, it still has 954 years to run, and $90,000 times 945 is $85,050,000, or nearly $85 million. Furthermore, the C.N.R. may some day be able to pay off the $7,000,000 it is about to borrow and thereby save an additional $210,000 annually—even more substantial saving.

Here and There

Scandinavians are puzzled by strange, rocket-like objects flying through the air. Maybe some of those Swedish runners have become airborne.

Those American officers alleged to have stolen the crown jewels of Hesse got their timing wrong. If it was the crown jewels, it would have been arch-aeology.

The Third Column

LONDON LETTER

By Charles Nichols

Britons who own cats—and that includes the vast majority of Britons—have been more than usually watchful eye on their pets these days and, as a consequence, medical research is likely to be seriously slowed up.

The unpalatable fact which has been borne in by recent development upon the British public mind is that cats are an ideal medium for medical experimentation and that cats are in fact, used for that purpose. It has always been so in recent years; but the public simply was not wholly aware of it.

Now that an Oxford professor, Edward George Tandy Liddell, has been convicted in court of neglecting his cats in the university laboratory and allowing them to suffer, the full cost of medical development in terms of cats lives has been made clear to the public consciousness with shocking suddenness. The newspapers, realising the intense interest most of their readers have in cats, have played the story with as much prominence as a triple murder would command in a paper.

Even before this development, the physiologists conducting research with cat subjects were having a difficult enough time. The strong and widely-supported Anti-Vivisection League and Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, as well as assorted organizations dedicated to the betterment of the welfare of cats, were doing their utmost to see that the felines did not get into the hands of dealers who would sell them for about $2 each to laboratories.

The efforts of these societies, however, were slightly offset by the fact that the medical researchers claimed cats used for vivisection were more humanely destroyed than those sent by owners to veterinarians to "put to sleep." Now that Professor Liddell has been convicted of neglect, resulting in some of his cats catching cold while awaiting experiments, the task of finding a constant supply of subjects is very likely to be a most insoluble one. As it was, only stray cats were available to laboratories. As it is now, any of the tens of thousands of cats owned by who has an owner is going to find it difficult indeed to stray.

Within sight of St. Paul's, the densely built-up business centre of London is broken today by what appear to be sunken gardens.

The walls of these gardens are partly garish new brickwork, partly the piled rubble of old buildings. The flowers are grown from seeds carried by the winds from the meadows outside the city into the earth made fallow by the exploding bombs which six years ago crumbled and burned the century-old buildings that used to stand there.

Six years ago the sunken places were filled with broken masonry and charred wood. A little later, after the wreckage had been carted away, they were cleared of the debris and the face of the oldest part of London.

Then, slowly, a nature which is more friendly and more part of the life of Britain than of any other country, began to creep up. The grass, the homely, middle-class sense of the decent which the English nature shares with the people, it began to work its way through the cracks in the bricks between the masonry rubble, along the edges of the jagged walls. Then, anywhere that seed could take root in the uneven breaks of what used to be cellar floors, it dropped the flower seeds.

Sir Ronald Storrs, a friend of Lawrence of Arabia and a writer on middle eastern affairs, is protesting against the appearance of a "dreadful gentility" in the English language.

Speaking to boys of King Edward's school, London, a few days ago, he told of making a long distance call from a pay phone. The operator's voice, he said, was "a most exquisite amount available?" What she meant was "Have you got your money ready?" and Sir Ronald thought she had said "I'd so instead of repeating 'the form that the wretched Post Office imposed on the poor girl.'"

'Billy the Scout' Least Known Canada Hero

B Y A D STUBBING
HAMILTON, July 5 (CP) — His torian browsing in old Hamilton records have unearthed the story of one of Canada's least-known heroes, William "Billy the Scout" Green, whose timely warning enabled the British to defeat United States forces at Stony Creek in what may have been the turning point of the war of 1812.

It was the morning of June 6, 1812, when the relentless advance of U.S. General Winder brought 3,000 foot soldiers, with added cavalry and artillery, to the settlement of Stony Creek, near Hamilton.

ENCAMPED at Burlington Heights was General Vincent with 700 men, all that stood between the Americans and a victorious dash around Lake Ontario to York.

As the Americans approached, 19-year-old Billy Green and his brother Levi, left their Stony Creek home to watch the advance.

Billy's own story of that day, says that he and his brother waited until the bulk of the American troops had passed then they gave Indian war whoops that frightened the enemy troops. Whether true or not, the Americans shortly after made camp and took precaution against Indians.

ON THEIR WAY home, the boys met their brother-in-law, Isaac Cornman, who had been captured by the invaders but had managed to escape after learning the password to get through the American lines. Cornman told Billy the password and advised him to sneak through the lines to warn General Vincent at Burlington Heights.

Billy managed to reach the British garrison, but had some trouble convincing them that he was not an American spy. Finally he was taken to the tent of one Gen. Vincent's aides and passed on information Cornman had given him concerning the American encampment.

However, the password, his main reason for coming had completely slipped Billy's mind.

A DARING NIGHT attack was planned and Billy was assigned to lead the way and warned that there was a man behind him. A drawn sword to deal with him if it turned out to be an American spy. The rest is history. Gen. Vincent's puny forces attacked the tired Americans and put them to rout. Two generals were taken prisoner in the early morning battle along with numerous American guns.

Billy the Scout lived on in Stony Creek, raising his family there. Unfortunately, it was not until late in life that he was persuaded to set down his exploit in writing, and undoubtedly much of it was lost in the passage of years.

ALTHOUGH GEN. VINCENT makes no mention of Billy the Scout in his battle report, among Wentworth County historians there is no doubt that Billy's ride through the virgin forest of Hamilton Mountain, contributed much to the decision to undertake the daring battle.

Crop Prospects Said Promising

O. S. Longman, deputy minister of agriculture, said Friday that Alberta's crop prospects "on the whole look very promising." His statement was made in commenting on an Ottawa report stating that the west could expect an average crop if favorable weather prevailed for four weeks. More rain was needed, however, in the Peace River district.

In northern part of the province there were no reports of serious infestation. So far no reports had been received from southern Alberta concerning this hazard.

From evidence already obvious the grass and forage crops promise a good yield, a welcome sign for stock ranchers in their problems of winter feeding.

The general acreage for cereal grains has been considerably increased over last year, the deputy minister said.

Dorothy Dix Says:

It is a matter of common knowledge that many women acquire husbands by means of false representations. Perhaps the wedding bells would not ring out so often and so merrily, if every prospective bride laid her cards on the table before marriage and gave the youth she was inviting to the altar a glimpse of how she looked early in the morning before she got her hair combed and her makeup on, and if she frankly and honestly told him how she was going to treat him after she got him.

One of these victims of the feminine confidence game has just been weeping on my shoulder and telling me his troubles. He says that a couple of years ago he married a pretty and attractive girl who had sold herself to him, look, stock and barrel, as the dream wife of every man's desires. He bitterly recalls that before marriage she spent hours upon hours picturing to him the cozy little home she would make for him with toothsome meals waiting for him when he returned tired out from his hard day's labor. Especially did she dwell, with fervor and persuasiveness, on how of a morning she would leap from her bed and just love to prepare him a delicious breakfast.

And he married her, but instead of getting a wife who is a domestic angel who knows how to cook and looks a picture in pink bunselow apron, he acquired a lachrymose who is allergic to the kitchen, who positively refuses to get up in the morning, who prepares a meal, or wash a dish, or sweep a floor, and who forces him to do all the housework as well as make a living.

THIS POOR LAD, who has been taken for a matrimonial ride, says he has given his wife two weeks' notice and that if she doesn't get busy in that time with the gas range and the broom he is going to fire her.

But, women are not the only ones who give the party of the other part a cooked deal in marriage and fail to deliver the goods as they have represented them. Men are often guilty of the same offense. And it is a strange quirk in human nature that makes people lie and cheat in the most important act of their lives, and in one in which their crime is bound to be uncovered.

For no matter how much the high-minded and nagging and bossy woman yea-sayses a man before marriage; no matter how much the lazy and shiftless one boasts of how domestic she is; no matter how much the human clothes horse prates of her economies, they all revert to type as soon as they come out of their hair after marriage.

What a pity that husbands and wives didn't have to make good on the bargains they sold some credulous woman or man.

New Zealand Gets Cars from Britain

AUCKLAND, N. Z., July 5 - (CP) - Britain has gained a big lead on the United States and Canada in exports of automobiles to New Zealand. There are nearly 1,000 post-war English cars on the roads already and more large shipments are due shortly.

The first supplies from North America are not expected for several months. From latest reports it seems unlikely that they will be able to undersell the English product as was at one time, although English cars are selling at nearly 100 per cent above the 1938 price.

Seek Name Change For Hospital Here

The Dominion department of national health is seeking an alternative to "Alexander Hospital" as the name to be given to the new hospital, according to word received here Friday by Deputy Mayor Sidney Parsons from Hon. James A. MacKinnon, minister of trade and commerce.

WHEN IT WAS LEARNED at the Civic Block that it was proposed to name the hospital "Alexander Hospital" the city commissioners communicated with Mr. MacKinnon, pointing out the possibility of considerable confusion and the similarity of the proposed name with that of the Royal Alexandra hospital.

The latter is commonly referred to as the "Alex" hospital, and it is extremely likely the same abbreviation would be adopted for the other institution, it was pointed out.

MR. MACKINNON immediately took the matter up with the Dominion minister of health, and a change of name is being made. His Excellency Viscount Alexander of Tunis will officially open the new hospital on his visit here.

Socialization Plan Is Extended in N. Z.

WELLINGTON, N. Z., July 5 - (CP) - The latest step in the New Zealand Labor governments socialization program is the introduction of consumers' co-operative societies to control all shops and other business in the huge state housing settlements being built throughout the country.

The proposal is that there should be communal ownership and control of all groceries, bakeries, butchers, hotels, theatres, restaurants, boarding houses, garages, service stations, coal, wood and milk supplies, and any other consumer services required.

GOVERNMENT OFFICERS have been canvassing state house tenants in the new suburbs for support for the plan. It is proposed to use state-built buildings which would be rented to the societies. Any profits would be disbursed in consumers' dividends and rebates. One society is already functioning at Naenae near Wellington. No room for private enterprise remains in this suburb. All buildings are state-owned and made available only to the society.

MAKE THEIR OWN Babies under five months of age manufacture their own vitamin C, according to English scientists. The power to do this decreases until, at the age of 14 months, it disappears entirely.

Trade Representative Sees Officials in City

First Canadian trade representative for the vast, still mysterious areas of central Africa, is the distinction for Leland H. Auman, of Toronto, who leaves for the Belgian Congo early this fall to open a Canadian trade commissioner's office in Leopoldville.

MR. AUMAN was an Edmonton visitor Friday where he conferred with heads of city firms and manufacturers with the view of obtaining information on products for export to Central African countries.

The visit here was arranged by T. Ashenburt, manager of the Alberta branch of the Canadian Manufacturers Association.

Prior to accepting the Belgian Congo post, Mr. Auman was trade commissioner for the Belgian Congo and the Belgian Congo for Canada at New York.

Until 1942 he was assistant trade commissioner in Bristol, England.

WHEN THE BLITZ was at its worst there was little in the way of trade work at the Bristol office, Mr. Auman recalled.

He served as a volunteer fire-fighter and air raid warden. Every window in the commission office was shattered by a bomb one night.

"We couldn't get any glass so we worked after that with boarded windows and artificial lighting," he said.

"FOUR BIG PROBLEMS" is to convince Canadians of the importance of shipping goods to these countries in order to build up markets at a time when domestic orders cannot be filled," he stated.

"However, these markets will be of great value to Canada in the future," he emphasized.

The Belgian Congo is now a rich industrial country although most of its mineral resources are in the future," he emphasized.

TIN, OTHER VALUABLE minerals, including uranium and industrial diamonds constitute the major source of trading wealth in the central African countries, Mr. Auman said.

GOING TO CONGO: Leland H. Auman, of Toronto, recently-appointed Canadian trade commissioner to the Belgian Congo. He was an Edmonton visitor Friday.

City Collecting Arrears of Taxes
Collection of arrears of City land taxes continues to break records. In the first six months of 1946 land sales of 1946 amounted to $1,045,341.98 of $280,558.79 in excess of the previous six month record established last year when $784,783.09 was collected from this source.

OF THE 1946 period collections of $80,220.75 came from the sale of tax forfeited lands and $189,121.13 from current tax arrears. In the first six months of 1945 the city collected $530,871.15 of the $764,783.09 collected, the balance coming from current taxes.

The total collection of current land taxes for the six months period ended June 30, 1946, was $784,783.09 compared with $2,349,902.14 for the same period last year.

TAX COLLECTIONS from all sources for the six months period ended June 30, 1946, amounted to $3,015,991.68 compared with $3,122,483.28 for the same period last year, an increase of $492,508.40.

George E. Andrews Dies: 56 Years Old
Assistant manager of the Edmonton branch of Credit Foncier, George E. Andrews, 56, died Friday at his home, 1014 1/2 Street, after a long illness.

He was survived by his wife, a son, Gordon and a daughter, Janet, in Edmonton and three sisters, Miss Lillian Andrews, Edmonton, Mrs. David Hodgson, Ottawa and Mrs. Horace Sulston, Vancouver.

A funeral service will be held at Andrews-McLaughlin chapel at 2 p.m. Saturday with the Rev. Dr. Scraggs officiating. Burial will take place in the family plot in Edmonton Cemetery.

Before the Magistrate
Four months imprisonment with hard labor was the sentence received by Nick Skulski when he appeared before Magistrate J. L. Miller, K.C. in city police court Friday morning on a charge of assault.

Evidence showed that Skulski had stolen a suit coat from another person's suitcase and was endeavoring to sell it when apprehended. Also found on him when arrested was a razor and looking glass which had been stolen from the suitcase. Skulski had been found guilty on three charges of theft during 1945.

A 24-HOUR NOTICE to get out of Edmonton and back to his home in Saskatchewan was given Glenarry Chamberlain when he appeared on a charge of vagrancy.

A charge of assault laid against John Carlson by Kate Kurtyatyn was dismissed by the magistrate, who stated there was too much doubt for a conviction.

NINE MOTORISTS charged with traffic offences were fined and admonished by the magistrate for their neglect of public safety.

Seek to Speed-up Payments of Grants
Quicker action on payment of family allowance is sought in an order-in-council amending governing regulations. It was announced Friday by H. C. L. Gilman, regional director. Under the new regulation, if an application for allowance is made within 30 days after birth, payment commences with the month in which the birth takes place, whereas under the old regulation, payment commenced in the month immediately following that in which application was made. The new regulation is effective as from June 7 last.

Trousers Stolen
Theft of a pair of trousers, containing $20 in cash, two American $10 bills, registration certificate and army papers, was reported to city police by James Rowland, 10220 110 Avenue. He stated that the trousers and contents were stolen from a tent at the rear of the given address. The incident occurred some time between 1 a.m. and 4:30 a.m. on June 30.

Canada provided almost 40% of the aluminum used in World War II.

Plane Beats Birds at Own Game
The airplane is beating the birds of the air at its own game. At least that would seem to be the implication to be drawn from the shipment received at offices of C.P. Air Lines here Friday.

Attack on Hospitality Of City Not Justified

J.H. Douglas' blast against Edmonton's hospitality must result from a "chip on his shoulder" against the city, and not from the treatment accorded him by hotel proprietors, in the opinion of several hotel managers and desk clerks.

IN AN INTERVIEW in the Calgary Alberta of Thursday, Mr. Douglas complained about his inability to obtain hotel accommodation in Edmonton, and stated he was forced to spend $28 in taxi fares to keep his wife and two small children from sleeping in a park. He described Edmonton as the worst city he has ever been in.

Hotelmen stated Friday that if Mr. Douglas had made his position clear — that he had a wife and two small children desperately in need of rest — emergency accommodation would have been provided. They added that the accommodation situation in Edmonton was more acute at present than at any time during the war years, but even with the prevailing situation means and means would have been found to accommodate this family had the facts been presented in a reasonable manner.

OF COURSE Mr. Douglas may be magnifying the difficulties encountered in Edmonton. He stated it took two nights and three days to make the trip to Fairbanks, Alaska, to Edmonton.

A check with Canadian Pacific Lines revealed that the flight on which Mr. Douglas and his family came to Edmonton left Fairbanks at 5:30 p.m. on the night of June 29, and the airplane was set down on the Edmonton airport seven minutes ahead of its scheduled arrival time of 7 a.m. the next morning.

"MR. DOUGLAS, who was actively engaged in the transportation industry at Alakivik, must have known of existing travel difficulties and with the current desperate hotel situation prevailing, and it seems that he was lacking in foresight in this regard. His reservations for his trip out by boat from Fairbanks, and for hotel accommodations in Edmonton, hotelmen here pointed out.

Hotel managers stated also that accommodation could have been found for this family. They said that all hotels have lists of homes in the city in which transients, unable to obtain hotel accommodation, can rent rooms. Staff in a number of the larger hotels in Edmonton could not recall any requests for accommodation of the nature required by Mr. Douglas.

Urges Provinces Be Heard On Redistribution Measure

OTTAWA, (CP)—Senator Will-B. Aseltine, acting Progressive Conservative leader, urged in the Senate this week that the voices of the provincial governments be heard before the federal government's redistribution resolution is sent to Westminster.

By a major amendment, the resolution would swell the number of members of the commons from 240 to 255 by insinuating representation by population.

Senator Aseltine was "shocked" at Justice Minister St. Laurent's statement that the federal government could recommend changes in the British North America act without consultation with the provinces except as it affected sections 91 and 92, dealing with federal and provincial rights.

Attacks Theory
He attacked the theory that members of parliament or senators represent the provinces as such. They represent parts of provinces but only provincial governments could speak for their provinces as a whole, he maintained.

He suggested that representatives of those governments be allowed to place their views before a senate committee on the bill. He suggested, as an alternative, that it should be a subject of discussion at a dominion-wide conference.

Senator J. J. Bench (Lib.-Ont.) asked, "Would it be fair to say that the provinces have to be unanimous?"

Wants Conference
Senator Aseltine said, "I feel a conference should be held. A decision taken as a result of the deliberations, if possible, all should agree, if they don't, then I'm not just sure what the next step should be."

The prairie provinces felt the results of the 1946 census there should be awaited to see if the wartime loss of population had been righted, he said.

He suggested that the present set-up be continued until conditions have returned to normal.

Scores Controls Farm Products

WINNIPEG.—"We are in favor of all controls being removed from products of the farm and ranch," L. Smith, Progressive Conservative M.P. for Calgary West, stated at his arrival here.

Mr. Smith made the statement when asked for his opinion of time Minister King's statement that Canada would not follow the United States in abolishing the C.P.A.

Of the federal budget, the Calgary member said: "There is no budget for this year. It is all for 1947. It is the first time in our history that we have not had a budget for any length of time and I believe postponement until January, 1947, will all expansion of industry during the remainder of the year."

Mr. Smith was of the opinion that there will be a conference of the non-provincial conference in the near future. He would not venture a statement on the outcome of the next conference but stated that the provinces would be broken if separate agreement with the federal government and others do not.

Widen Rulings Aid Veterans

OTTAWA, (CP)—A recommendation that all government departments and agencies abide by the provisions of the Rehabilitation in Civil Employment act was approved Thursday by the veterans committee of the commons.

Howard Green (Prog. Con., Vancouver south).

Under present regulations, those men would only be entitled to get their jobs back if they had received permission to enlist. Several members referred particularly to members of the R.C.M.P. and urged that all mounties who enlisted be reinstated with seniority.

B. B. McKay (C.C.P., Weyburn) said one former provost captain had returned to the R.C.M.P. and been put to work "cleaning latrines to break his spirit."

W. S. Woods, deputy veterans minister, said that only recently he had been told to draft instructions for government departments to observe "at least the spirit" of the reinstatement regulations.

The motion was passed unanimously.

Captain Offered Rank of Private

OTTAWA, (CP)—The veterans committee of the commons was told Thursday that permanent force soldier who rose to the rank of captain during the war had been offered the alternative of becoming a private or retiring.

Expert Surveys Quake at Coast

OTTAWA, (CP)—If it's any comfort to British Columbians who still feel shaky from their heaviest recent tremor in years, Canada's top earthquake man intends to put in his place the shock which shattered a peaceful coast Sabbath last June 20, rocking buildings at Vancouver, Victoria and Courtenay, B.C.

After an intensive study here of preliminary data, Dr. E. A. Hodge, dominion seismologist, left for the coast by plane to investigate damage done by the quake and, if possible, its epicentre—the point on the earth's surface from which the emanations radiate.

His investigations probably will be conducted mainly on Vancouver Island, where the shocks were heaviest.

Field observations indicate the quake was centred in the Comox area, 60 miles northwest of Nanaimo.

Fears Invasion Private Business

OTTAWA, (CP)—Concern the government might invade private business fields through crown companies was expressed Thursday by Senator T. A. Crerar (Lib. Manitoba) at a meeting of the senate banking and commerce committee.

The committee had before it bills providing regulations for crown companies and amending the government-owned enterprise act. Senator Crerar was told the power of the companies would be no greater than those held by the minister himself.

Senator Crerar said he had been hopeful that the government would get out of business after the war. He asked particularly about the government-owned automobile, the reconstruction of the automobile industry, and the reconstruction of the automobile industry.

"We are getting out of business as fast as we can and a lot faster than the United States. Our industry operates without subsidies and right now we have no other rubber," he said.

27 Percent of Canadians Are Dissatisfied With U.N.

By Canadian Institute of Public Opinion
TORONTO.—The general public of the United States, like Australia, shows more dissatisfaction with the accomplishments of the United Nations than does the Canadian public.

In all three countries, however, a joint opinion survey, carried out by the affiliated Gallup Poll organizations, shows a sizeable segment of the general public dissatisfied.

Major of the joint survey was an identically worded question: "Are you satisfied or dissatisfied with the progress made to date by the United Nations organization?"

This question was asked by trained interviewers of a typical sample of the adult population (over 21 years) in the three countries. It will be seen from the table below that about one in three persons in the United States and Australia are dissatisfied, while over a quarter in the two British countries, the public tends to be less definite and more undecided than the American public.

Canada, U.S., Australia
Satisfied — 39% 37% 34%
Dissatisfied — 34 37 34
Undecided — 24 26 32

In the Canadian survey, those who expressed an opinion were asked to give a reason. Greatest cause of dissatisfaction is the obvious one, "Too much talking and squabbling, and not enough action."

Among those who were dissatisfied, the Spanish question was referred to fairly frequently. Many contrary views were expressed in connection with Russia, some voters taking the stand that the U.N. had "not been firm enough with Russia" or "catered too much to Russia," while others took the reverse position, claiming that the British and American representatives had "not tried to get along with Russia."

The survey found that Canadian women are much more undecided than are the men, indicating less interest in, or familiarity with, the international scene.
